No.	Course Code and Title	Brief Description	Semester
1	POLI 712: Issues and Problems of Development in Africa	The course focuses on the issues and problems that underpin Africa's development, including democratization, corruption, poverty, military intervention and disregard for constitutional term limits, among other issues. practical solutions are provided through an in-depth country case study method to selected issues in the continent	Second Semester
2	POLI 658: The Politics of International Economy	This course examines the politics that underly the economic decisions that are taken at the global level. It examines the politics of trade, debt, development strategy, industrialization and development assistance among other issues that regulate the international economy	Second Semester
3	POLI 633: Conflicts in African States	This course introduces students to conflict mapping and analysis in the continent of Africa and the practical strategies required to deal with them. It examines, from a theoretical perspective, root causes of conflicts in Africa and the requisite strategies required to attend to them in the long term	First Semester
4	POLI 631: Conflict Resolution and Peace Studies	This course focuses on general conflict analysis and resolution and draws examples and theoretical framework from across the globe. It examines how these conflicts impact on the lives of people and also its impact on policy making worldwide.	First Semester

5	POLI 671: Governance, Democracy and Institutional Reform	This course introduces students to the governance process in Africa: the nature, types and implication for development. It also examines democracy and its variants forms and the concept of “democratic recession” vis-à-vis “developmental autocracies” in the continent. It further looks at the caliber of reforms needed in Africa and the implication of same to development.	First Semester (Sandwich)
6	POLI 674: Africa And the International Economy	This course focuses on the Africa’s political economy: nature, type, dynamics and process, and its relationship to, and role in the international economy. the level of integration and the challenges of same and what Africa can do about it.	Second Semester (Sandwich)
7	INTA 618: Ghanaian Foreign Policy	This course introduces students to foreign policy studies, the theoretical underpinnings, foreign policy tools required for states, the notion of national interest, Ghana’s relations with supra-state institutions and regional blocks.	Second Semester
8	INTA 622: Issues in Ghanaian Foreign Policy	This course focuses on foreign policy decisions made by the respective governments in Ghana since the first president, Kwame Nkrumah. it picks on salient foreign policy decisions under each government and examines the context, the rationale and the implication of that policy to Ghana’s national interest.

9	MRPP 651: Governance and Politics of Public Policy	This course introduces students to the concept of governance and how politics affects and impact on the policy decisions that are made by the state. It specifically, interrogates the role of the arms of government, i.e., the executive, judiciary and legislature; and other non-state institutions and organized political groups and how they impact policy making.	First Semester
10	CSPS 606: Managing Social Conflicts and Consensus Building	This course focuses on the social conflicts and how these conflicts impact on the lives and policy making in the country. It examines concepts of conflicts, theoretical underpinnings, nature and dynamics and the resolution process.	Second Semester
