

SYNOPSIS - The Fault Dear Brutus ...

The speaker Tony Oteng-Gyasi is well-known in the country's Private Sector, particularly in manufacturing.

In this thought-provoking presentation, he examines the effect of qualitative issues such as culture, law and human behaviour in formulating growth and development policies for the nation.

He uses examples drawn from the history of the nation to illustrate the need to consider these factors in policy implementation and monitoring.

The examples he draws upon are from pre-independence to the present.

He holds up a mirror to us, as a people and as a nation.

In the process, we see ourselves as other people see us.

Appropriate lessons are drawn and additional measures are suggested in our quest for economic development.
